THE NEW YORK RESULT.

Van Wyck, the Tammany candidate, was elected mayor of New York yesterday by a plurality of nearly 90,000 votes over Low. The combined vote for Low and Tracy was about 15,000 in excess of the vote for Van Wyck; while the total vote for all other candidates was some 50,000 greater than Van Wyck's vote. Tammany has won, therefore, by reason of the division among the opposing forces. This was the result that all intelligent observers of New York politics feared. Probably if Henry George had lived, and had had the strength to press his campaign for the few remaining days of the campaign, the plurality for Van Wyck would have been considerably reduced. But it is not likely that he would have failed of election.

It is not necessary for us to say that we look upon the result as in every way most deplorable. For it the Republican machine—the Republican boss is responsible. Had it endorsed the nomination of Mr. Low by the Citizens' Union and loyally supported him, there is no doubt in our minds that Mr. Low would have been elected by a large majority. But Tom Platt—not the party, for it had nothing to say in the premises—Platt refused to consider Mr. Low. He would have no man nominated by the Republican party that refused complete and humble allegiance to him. Rather than have an independent Republican mayor in New York, he preferred Tammany. With Tammany he has always been able to get on comfortably. Its policies, methods and ideals are the sort he admires.

It will not do to make the "easy" answer that if the Citizens' Union had retired from the field Mr. Tracy could have been elected. Such an answer would betray large ignorance of New York politics. New York is a Democratic city. That is the fundamental fact of the situation. In any purely political contest the Democrats will always win. New York Democrats of the more thoughtful classes say: "If we are shut up to a choice between the Tammany machine, bad as it is, and the Platt machine, we will vote for the former every time. However bad Tammany is, we consider Platt worse." Now, a large part of Mr. Low's following was Democrats of the more thoughtful class. They were in the Citizens' Union because that was arrayed against both party machines, because it stood for a divorcing of municipal from national politics, because it had no aims but the best government of the city. But if the Citizens' Union had collapsed or surrendered to Platt these men would not have voted for Tracy. As between Tammany and Platt they would have preferred the former.

This is not a matter of speculation; it is a matter of history. It has been demonstrated over and over again. When the Republicans nominated Tracy, the election of the Tammany candidate was made certain. Platt wanted it that way unless he could secure pledges from Low. This was perfectly well-known to every one that knows anything about New York politics. And yet General Tracy, once a United States Cabinet officer, lent himself to this disgraceful game, and Republicans of national reputation and of the highest character, like ex-President Harrison, Chauncey M. Depew and Secretary Bliss, urged it on and professed to believe, in spite of the plain teachings of history and common sense, that it would win.

The restoration of Tammany to power is a disgrace not only to New York itself, but to the entire country. There is no dispute as to the corrupt, corrupting and mercenary character of the organization. It works New York by all the hideous processes of blackmail on vice and corrupt contractors for "all it is worth." Croker again becomes the absolute ruler of the city, as much so as an ancient Greek tyrant or an Oriental despot. Van Wyck is his man. To the people of the city he is practically unknown. In any proper sense, they never heard of him until he was nominated. He has not been an influence in the civic life in any sense. While his family and antecedents are good, his reputation is marred by private excesses which make him a contemptible figure for so exalted and responsible a position. No one knows what his views are on any public question. He has not been permitted to open his mouth during the campaign. He will be mayor of New York, in name, because Dick Croker wanted him; he will do what Dick Croker wants done.

This New York, the second city of the world in point of population, commerce and wealth, begins its career in its enlarged capacity and under its new and experimental charter under the complete domination of an ignorant and characterless fellow, who began his career as a prize-fighter and tough, and whose previous control of the politics of the city brought it to the lowest ebb of corruption in its history. And this is due to the fact that large numbers of the decent men of the great city insist on voting in their local election, not with reference to local issues and demands, but with reference to national politics; because they blindly follow their party standard, who ever the racial that bears it, and whitewash it as he chooses to see.

ASSESSMENT LIFE INSURANCE.
Section 4 of the insurance law, passed by the last Legislature, defines what is meant by the assessment plan. It says: "Any corporation, association or society organized to insure lives, which provides for the payment of policy claims or the accumulation of reserve or emergency funds, and the expense of management and prosecution of the business by payments to be made either at periods named in the contract, or upon assessments as required by persons holding similar contracts, and wherein the insured's liability to contribute to the payment of policy claims, assessed or to accrue, is not limited to a fixed sum, shall be deemed to be engaged in the business of life insurance upon the assessment plan, and shall be subject only to the provisions of this act."

This definition clearly indicates the character of the business which the Legislature intended that assessment associations should do, by exempting these associations and societies from the requirements to which the great standard life insurance companies are subjected.

Section 7, in providing that any such company shall only be required to maintain a reserve or emergency fund equal to "one assessment or periodical payment by its policy or certificate holders, and in no event less than the amount of its maximum policy or certificate," without any regard to the amount of its policy obligations outstanding, very clearly evidences the character and quality of insurance contemplated by the law. In providing that wherever a company shall use any portion of this fund for the purpose for which it is created, and the fund is thereby reduced below the amount of one death assessment or periodical payment, the reduction shall, within six months, be made good, the Legislature again indicates that the reserve or emergency fund is for a temporary purpose only—that of enabling the company to have on hand in cash an amount equal to its largest policy obligation. Moreover, in providing that when such fund is in excess of the above requirements, and not less than $50,000, the excess may be used to reduce the payments of policyholders, it again indicates the character of the insurance contemplated in this act. The provision that a company may accumulate other funds does not change this character, since the requirements of the company as to the amount of the so-called reserve or emergency fund remain the same, whether or the company or society has one million or fifty millions of outstanding policy obligations. It is, therefore, clear that the so-called reserve or emergency fund bears no relation to the amount of policy obligations outstanding by the company or society and has no function whatever to perform except to enable the company or society to have the funds in hand to pay promptly its maximum policy obligation in the event of death.

That such a company might not mislead the public regarding the kind of business contemplated in this act, the proviso to the section clearly stipulates that "nothing contained in this act shall be construed to permit any contract promising any fixed cash payment to a policyholder or policyholder, except in the contingency of physical disability." The proviso is, by its terms, as broad as the whole act, and its only exception provides the only contingency in which something definite may be promised any policyholder during life. The exception again shows that temporary or assessment insurance, as understood by the people, was the only kind of life insurance contemplated by the law.

The auditor of State should require of all companies doing business under this act strict conformity to its requirements. Paid-up values, loan values, cash values and extended insurance (all subject to the emergency clause) would seem to have no place in the policy issued under such a law. At any rate, with the multitude of new companies now being created in this State, often by men of unknown or doubtful antecedents, and of similar companies organized in other States seeking business in Indiana (and the number of these is very great, while their character is often very doubtful), the sooner the legality of these provisions in said policies is submitted to a proper court for settlement, the better it will be both for our insurance department, and especially for the people of the State of Indiana.

THE POWER OF THE PRESS.
There is a class of men that for some unknown reason, array themselves against newspapers and delight to talk against them. Men of this class were in evidence this morning, and their scornful "Ha ha" filled the early morning street cars. "Tammany wins and every newspaper in New York was fighting against it. That shows there is nothing in all this talk about the power of the press," said one man, a business man, and presumably a good citizen. Of course, every one in the car laughed at the remark—every one, that is except one or two newspaper men, who happened to be in the car and who, feeling the eyes of the passengers on them, smiled faintly, but un sympathetically. There is, however, a germ of truth in the raucous remark of the business man. It is a fact that the best newspapers of New York were fighting against Tammany. The Herald, the Evening Post, the Mail and Express, the Press, the Commercial Advertiser, the Tribune, the World, the Times, the Sun, the States Zeitung and the Brooklyn Eagle—all advised against the candidate named by Dick Croker. Their advice was not taken and Croker's man is elected, but there is no doubt that if these newspapers had to go through the same campaign again they would steer the same course.

The election of the candidate of a disreputable political organization, an organization that stands for the worst influences in politics, does not, however, show that the press has no power. It shows rather that the people, refusing to be advised, are willing to be made the tools of a corrupt political machine. The power of the press is merely an advisory power. The editors of large newspapers are usually educated men, having the best interests of the city in which they live at heart. They desire good government, and, as was shown very clearly in New York, they are not side-bound in the matter of partisanship. When the issue is plainly made, as it was between Tammany and the candidates opposed to Tammany, when it was made clear that any candidate might be expected to give Greater New York a better government than the Tammany candidate could give it, the newspapers, with united voice, advised against Tammany. This was the extent of their power. They tried to show, clearly and without prejudice, what the election of Van Wyck meant; they tried to show how much was involved in the election of a decent man to the important office of mayor of New York; they tried to show the people what they would lose by placing the city under the rule of a "boss" like Dick Croker. Doing this, they did their duty to the people. The people disregarded or ignored the advice. They preferred to vote with the machine.

Might not make right, even in this country of majority rule, and the end will show that the press of New York was right, and no one that realizes what Tammany stands for, that knows that Tammany has inherited "steals" and "deals" and corrupt practices of every description, but will feel that there are thousands of New York citizens that will come to be ashamed for their actions yesterday; that will regret that they disregarded the earnest voice of an outspoken press. The Tammany Democracy is triumphant, but—the right shall prevail.

Croker is the uncrowned king.

A few weeks ago it was announced that Dr. Elmer Gates, of Washington, had succeeded in reproducing and magnifying microscopic images, thereby increasing the power of the instrument tremendously. Dr. Gates now proclaims that he can apply his principles to the telescope. He says that in his experiments at Fort Reno he focused the telescope upon a pine tree at about two and a half miles distant and was enabled "distinctly" to see the separate pine needles upon a single twig." While Dr. Gates' claims will be received with some incredulity, few things are deemed impossible in scientific fields nowadays, and if Dr. Gates can do half of what he claims the possibilities of telescope research will have been immeasurably increased. We should then be able, perhaps, to settle the question whether Mars is inhabited. Dr. Gates will certainly receive every encouragement in perfecting and applying his discoveries.

Hanna seems to have been the issue in Ohio.

The Sanitary Association might profitably hold communion with the Local Council of Women, to judge by the meeting of the latter yesterday. This meeting discussed "the aesthetic in the life of the community," and heard some very pleasant as well as some spirited remarks. Where the sanitary society might profitably be in imbibing enough love for the aesthetic to withdraw its request to the Park Board that the old covered bridge over White river, near the proposed park, be taken down. The Sanitary Society's reason for this iconoclasm is that the bridge is a source of unsanitary and immoral conditions, besides being a blot on the landscape. If the bridge is unsanitary, a statement with which we take issue, it can be made sanitary. But a bridge that is not used, a bridge made of wood, manifestly exists under conditions that are at war with unsanitary things. Moreover, the bridge is misused in any particular, it can be entirely closed. It should be left for the very reason that it is not a blot on the landscape. It is one of the most picturesque structures of its kind. Its life measures almost the life of the town. It is one of the few existing monuments of early Indianapolis. No prettier scene could be made than to have that bridge at the park entrance. It is the one attractive thing in the raw and barren landscape of that region. We trust that the Park Board has imbibed a sense of fitness sufficient to withstand this request to remove the old bridge.

Is it the "greater" New York?

Yesterday's New York papers, which arrived this morning, containing predictions and large-sized claims, appear both ancient and ridiculous. We make history fast nowadays, and news a day old is hardly news at all.

Carter Harrison, the young mayor of Chicago, and the son of his father, has been invited to attend the Commercial Club dinner in this city at which the "Making of a Model City" is to be the subject of discussion. The club should now put Robert A. Van Wyck to its list. Or, better would it do to offer the greatest possible attraction, and get the two chief exponents of the kind of "Model City" the club seems to have in mind in inviting Harrison—Boss Croker and Boss Platt? Why stop short of the real thing? Mr. Harrison is young yet. In time he may know as much about "model cities" as Tammany's leader does. Perhaps the club seeks to encourage his budding ambition and expand his already swollen head. His chief claim for distinction as a guest at the "model city" dinner is that he led a delegation of Chicago political spoils-men to New York to mislead the local contest, to drink wine and to throw weight influence they had to the loss of the corrupt power New York has ever known. Perhaps the fact that about four hundred policemen were dismissed in one day under Harrison's administration to make way for four hundred police-hunters had something to do with qualifying him to become a fit guest at the Commercial Club's board. If Harrison will exhibit a finer discrimination than the club's committee on arrangements has shown, and decline to accept the invitation, the dinner may be an enjoyable affair, for some estimable gentlemen are on the ticket. Or, if he accepts the invitation, we propose for him a toast in keeping with his knowledge and ambitions: "Why I prefer government by Tammany methods to government by the people in our 'Model City.'"

Adolph Luettgen's Attorney.
Chicago, November 2.—Former Lieutenant-Governor John H. L. L. Luettgen is in the city for the purpose, it is said, of conferring with Adolph Luettgen and attorneys Vincent and Phalen. Luettgen denies that Johnson was connected with the defense in the second trial, which begins next Monday. He insists that his relations with Mr. Vincent are most cordial, and that Johnson has been discussed as an additional counsel. He said he would not be the best of the Lieutenant-Governor's services would cost more than he was able to pay.

Cashier and Money Gave.
New York, November 2.—The Herald says: Aleck Uhlman, a member of the Metropolitan Trust Association, and one of the heaviest layers of odds in the betting ring at local race tracks, makes public the fact that he is looking for Frederick Fisher, his cashier, and a sum of money estimated at from $25,000 to $35,000. Uhlman says that Fisher carried the money for his book, and that he had not been able to find him for several days, and has left no notification of his departure.

Miss Elliott's Promise.
San Francisco, November 2.—Miss Alice Margaret Elliott, who claims to be heir to $1,000,000, said to have been left by the late Isabel Clark, who died in Australia, has given a written pledge to the California Bible Society to pay its debt of $5,000 if she secures the inheritance.

est Republicans throughout the country think of him to-day? What does General Harrison think of him? What does President McKinley and Secretary Bliss think of him? He never had the remotest hope of electing Tracy. He did not nominate him to elect him. He played the Blucher to Croker's Wellington, and, as in that historic case, the victory means a return of the Bourbons to power. But they will yet be driven out. We do not believe that the noble men who supported St. Louis will lay aside their armor until they retrieve yesterday's disaster. These misadvised and enslaved Republicans who thought they were fighting for sound money now have the satisfaction of knowing that, on their theory of the campaign, sound money was beaten.

We are told that Platt remained in his apartments last night and could not be seen. If he could have been seen, he would, no doubt, have been seen winking the other eye.

If the people of New York like that sort of thing, why, that is the sort of thing they like.

The New York verdict is not final. There will be a rehearing and a reversal. The people of New York will have to suffer the consequences of their own folly, as is entirely proper. It is a little hard that the American name should suffer and that democratic institutions should undergo reproach because of the failure of the people of New York to do plain duty. But these things will pass. Many men would rather purchase immunity from Tammany Hall than risk a battle with it. Then there is another class which votes as a unit as some one man dictates. These are the vicious dwellers in dives and the crooks, the men that want jobs, and who live on the weakness of mankind. In addition to these are the poor and the oppressed, who fear to antagonize some district leader, and there are hundreds of thousands of foreigners in New York, who have been trained to a life of servility to some boss. But there are enough good citizens in New York, after making all these deductions, to save it, and we believe that salvation is only deferred. The comfortable and wealthy people will be aroused to a sense of their own disgrace. To the persecuted poor it must be shown that they can with safety antagonize the boss and his district leaders. We do not appreciate how perilous it is for the humble man to fight Tammany Hall. He knows that if the fight should fail he would suffer the severest punishment. There is a species of terrorism in New York which makes it exceedingly difficult to elect a reform candidate. Many a man would vote against Tammany Hall if he were not sure that Tammany would go to defeat. It must be made possible for them to vote as freemen. The terrorism must be dispelled. And so the Citizens' Union ought to keep up and strengthen its organization.

The really pitiful tragedy of the New York campaign was the raking of General Tracy through the mire by Tom Platt. But then he was willing.

We decline to consider the result in New York yesterday as in any way settling the great issue involved in the fight. The struggle will go on, and the ultimate victory will be made the easier by yesterday's reverse. The bosses will grow more dictatorial, the corruption of their administration will increase, the scandals will grow, until finally the people will surely be driven to revolt against the condition of things which they themselves have made possible.

Mr. Grosvener comes out of the Ohio campaign with his pocket as a calculator considerably damaged.

It is disheartening to reflect that the people of the first city in the great Western world could be brought to elect as their chief magistrate a man who was not allowed to open his mouth during the campaign, and who was notoriously nominated by the infamous Croker.

It has no desire to palliate the situation. It is as deplorable as it can well be. The people have simply abdicated in favor of the bosses.

Secretary Bliss might prefer to vacate his seat. Hanna may want it.

At this writing it seems probable that Gorman has won by a small margin, which is greatly to be regretted. Gorman is the same type of man in the Democratic party as Platt in the Republican. He believes in and practices the principle of rule or ruin.

The administration interfered in New York politics again—with the usual result.

On the whole the elections show the usual reaction. The Republicans lose ground in many parts of the country. Where they win, they win by reduced majorities. It is at this writing doubtful whether the Ohio Legislature will be Republican. If it is, it will be by a very small majority. On general principles we are opposed to all bosses and bossism. But when the choice of Senator is between a man like Marcus Hanna and John R. McLean, we should consider it a public calamity if the latter should win out. Bosses as Hanna is, he is infinitely to be preferred to such a man as McLean.

Congratulate yourself on not being a New York taxpayer for the next few years.

The Democrats seem to have got about everything in sight in New York. There seems even to be a possibility that they will control the Legislature.

To My Eastern Helpers.
O Friends whom I have never seen,
Who yet have helped me on my way,
Who have made earth look more bright and green,
And added sunshine to my day!

O Here, through whose noble dead
My own weak soul has stronger grown!
O In the hour of need and gloom
A message sweet, and all my own!

Clear Thinker, who to me revealed
Some truth or beauty rare and fine,
Whose eye had made me still be sealed,
Hadst thou not made me still be sealed!

Great Painter, who for me did paint
Upon the glowing canvas these
That sweet, that rarely beautiful face
That woe me for a while from care!

Magician, Spoken, whose fine art
Has made my eyes and heart so glad,
Whose beauty fills my grateful heart
With joy it hath but rarely known!

O Saint, whose path and holy life
Has made me wish mine own more holy too,
To wage with wrong unceasing strife,
How can I pay my debt to you?

O Friends whom I have never seen,
Who yet have helped me on my way,
Who have made earth look more bright and green,
And added sunshine to my day!

But I can pass the cup along,
The cup of blessing, fresh and sweet,
Into some mouth that paid a song,
And some heart that paid a debt.

And thus I shall make payment meet
To those who've done so much for me;
I'll try to make the living more sweet
Of some whom I will never see.

A Gloomy Outlook for Spain.
London Times, October 12.

The following statement regarding affairs in Cuba has been made by an Englishman who, during his residence in Cuba, has had exceptional opportunities for ascertaining the real condition of affairs in the island, both in the large towns and in the interior.

"Havana, October 12. 'The statements which have reached here from Europe that a large portion of Cuba has been pacified and that tranquillity will be restored all over the island in a few weeks or months, are simply laughable. The situation is as bad as had can be. Not a single province of Cuba is in any degree pacified, nor is the state of things in any way better than it was two years ago. Matters are, indeed, worse, if only for the reason that the insurgents are stronger, better organized, better armed and more confident than they were then. At the present moment Havana is practically surrounded by 20,000 soldiers in the condition of the Spanish troops that there are not fewer than 20,000 soldiers in hospital in Havana alone. Every day that passes is a victory for the insurgents, and means a loss in money and men to the Spaniards. After three years' fighting the Cubans have now been drilled into a more efficient troops. Under Maximino Gomez, who has shown himself to be a man of great determination, the power of the rebels has increased. The rebels are in considerable force. Instead of, as formerly, confining their operations to the country the insurgents now enter the principal towns, and the eyes of the Spaniards, take by force what they want. Gomez has declared his policy to be one of total annihilation. The rebels are in considerable force. The Old Officers Re-Elected - The Resolutions Adopted.

Buffalo, November 3.-The election of officers was the principal event of yesterday's session of the W. C. T. U. The present officers were re-elected unanimously, as follows: President, Miss Frances E. Willard; vice-president-at-large, Mrs. Lillian M. Stevens, of Massachusetts; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Katherine Svenson, of Massachusetts; recording secretary, Mrs. Clara C. Hoffman, of Missouri; treasurer, Mrs. Helen M. Barber, of Illinois. Miss Wil-

Francis E. Willard; vice-president-at-large, Mrs. Lillian M. Stevens, of Massachusetts; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Mary E. Johnson, of Massachusetts; recording secretary, Mrs. Clara Hoffman, of Missouri; treasurer, Mrs. Helen M. Barber, of Illinois. Miss Willard was elected president, Mrs. Lillian M. Stevens as vice-president, and Mrs. Hoffman announced the re-appointment of Mrs. Frances E. Beauchamp as assistant secretary.

The resolutions committee submitted a preamble and resolutions, which were adopted, affirming fidelity to the principles of the constitution, desiring the seventh commandment as the only standard way of dealing with vice; insisting on an educational instead of sex test for the sale of liquor; opposing all laws which by license, tax, or otherwise, provide for the sale of liquor as a beverage; declaring for determined action at the serving of wines at the annual reunion of Princeton, and favoring each other for equal service without regard to sex.

Billy Flynn and Mayor Taggart

To the Editor of The Indianapolis News:

Mayor Taggart has just appointed Billy Flynn assistant street inspector, in fact, a position which is not at all absolutely unnecessary. No such office has ever before had an existence during the history of the city. The position of street inspector is to oversee the sweeping and sprinkling of streets. The position of Billy Flynn is to do the work, but for six months no sprinkling is done, and, of course, no inspector for streets.

Every one who knows about this work knows that, in fact, an assistant is but little needed in the summer season, when the streets are not being sprinkled. The inspector can do all the work himself by hustling a little. But the city is not going to let Billy Flynn work to keep one man busy more than half his time. There is no sprinkling years ago; and, in fact, as the use of the magnetic needle was not so common as it is now, the latter can not at all be surprised at its taking a poor man so long to get out of that place when he is once fairly set into it without compass, chart, fog or tobacco. The 'Door Frairie' and the other smaller ones about Lake It to be what remains of the ancient occupants, and why the order of things has been changed, both in the Stygian Fields and about the Stygian Fields, neither the present natives along the Kankakee, nor the owners, pre-emptors and occupants of 'Door Frairie' could tell me. I leave this to be forestalled by some other writer.

To have a correct idea of this town-poet, the ancient poets should be well read. Everything said by them respecting the nether regions, and the mode of the wicked should be applied to it, and the whole will make a correct, faithful and true description thereof. It is very thought of it makes my blood cold."

It Is Near Chicago.

In this place, so much sung by the ancient poets, according to the representation of the Government of the United tes, is about fifty miles southeast of Chicago. English lake forms a part of the boundary line between the counties of Laporte and Starko. Its still, deep waters make it a favorite fishing resort for men from Indianapolis, Chicago, Ft. Wayne and Lafayette. The Kanabes, which is formed farther up toward the Michigan line, pursues a sluggish course to the southwest, and finally crosses over into Illinois. The country through which it makes its way has been described time and again by the poets of northern Inand even James Whitcomb Riley put it into verse, but not until the official report of Mr. Smith was rendered was it known that Virgil was owing to the little prairie abode the same debt of gratitude that the visitors owed their steps toward the Egyptian Gods, and after duly hanging up the denouement at the gate for Prospero's acceptance, they extracted the Green shades, folded 'em with love. A parade of pleasant memories brightened the fumes of purple night. "I realize you know what they know," That shine like ours, but shine below.
